

The Reeve-Irvine Research Center (RIRC) would like to cordially invite you to its Annual Medal Symposium, this year honoring Dr. Allan Basbaum (UCSF), Claire Hulsebosch (University of Texas) and Clifford Woolf (Harvard University), happening in October 23rd, 2017 at the University of California, San Francisco.

The Reeve-Irvine Medal Symposium is a full-day event with focus on “Pain: Mechanisms and Emerging Therapies”.

Please RSVP your attendance at metcalfe@uci.edu

Distinguished speakers and discussion topics:

Speaker	Company/Institution	Talk Titles
*Claire Hulsebosch	The University of Texas Health Science Center at Houston	Persistent inflammation and pain after spinal cord trauma
*Allan Basbaum	University of California San Francisco	Cell transplants to treat chronic pain
*Clifford Woolf	Harvard University	Teasing out drivers of pain and their consequences
Bhagat Singh	Harvard University	Exploring chemotherapy induced peripheral neuropathy
Alban Latremoliere	Harvard University	Modulating pain through sleep
Edgar Terry Walters	The University of Texas Health Science Center at Houston	Persistent nociceptor hyperexcitability induced by SCI: Doleful consequences, hopeful implications
Scott Whittermore	University of Louisville School of Medicine	Proteostasis as an end global therapeutic target for CNS injury
David Luo	University of California, Irvine	Abnormal synaptogenesis in neuropathic pain development